British Vets Gain Guidance in Reporting Violence

A guide to help British veterinarians recognize and report suspected animal abuse, domestic violence, child maltreatment and elder abuse has been published by The Links Group, our sister British organization that promotes the welfare and safety of vulnerable family members.

Recognising Abuse in Animals and Humans: Guidance for Veterinary Surgeons and Other Veterinary Employees is a companion to the earlier American publication, Practical Guidance for the Effective Response by Veterinarians to Suspected Animal Cruelty, Abuse and Neglect (see LINK-Letter October 2011). It follows the recent creation of the pilot Scottish Domestic Abuse Veterinary Initiative of Medics Against Violence and the Violence Reduction Unit (MAV/DAVI) (see LINK-Letter November, 2011).

Recognising abuse in animals and humans:

Guidance for veterinary surgeons and other veterinary employees

July 2012

Noting that different terms are often used interchangeably for animal abuse, and that animal abuse may occur within complex interrelationships of family violence, Links Group Chair Freda Scott-Park says the Guidance focuses on deliberate or non-accidental injury (NAI) and encourages veterinarians to craft straightforward practice protocols for staff members who have concerns that they may be observing NAI.

“Over the last 10 years, it has become apparent that veterinary surgeons must become an essential part of the team required to break the cycle of abuse. Our colleagues working with vulnerable children and adults have welcomed the active participation of veterinary surgeons through the Links Group in establishing a cross-reporting mechanism, so that suspicions of abuse, whether to animal, adult or child, may be reported to the relevant body,” Scott-Park wrote.

The Guidance:

- describes the veterinary profession’s responsibility and confidentiality considerations under the Animal Welfare Acts and RCVS Code of Veterinary Conduct;
- offers an overview of child, animal and domestic abuse and the links between them;
- defines types of physical, sexual and emotional abuse and neglect and how to recognize them;
- explains the importance of a multi-agency approach; and

- gives practical advice on establishing channels of communication for cross-reporting.

“No one should doubt the complexities of deciding whether a situation warrants being reported,” she wrote, recommending that practitioners follow the principles of ADVOR – Asking, Validating, Documenting and Reporting – to yield extra information. “Every practice should have a protocol for members of staff to follow.”

The Guidance presents a decision-making cascade of when to report suspected abuse, based upon the degree of suspicion or injury, disclosure by the client or others, and clients’ fear of reporting because they may be victims themselves.

British practitioners may breach traditional veterinary/client confidentiality constraints if animal welfare or the public interest are compromised and if their concerns are based on first-hand knowledge rather than hearsay. NAI should be included in the differential diagnosis in cases where the injured animal’s clinical signs cannot be attributed to the history provided by the client.

Evidence for The Link prompted the RCVS’ Code of Conduct to say that vets should consider whether a child may be at risk, either in the presence or absence of animal abuse, and should consider reporting such matters to relevant child welfare authorities. “It is better to investigate every case where there might be risk of harm to children,” she wrote. “There is a risk that agencies become overloaded with cases which may have no substance; a balance must be struck between over-reaction and ignorance.”

Safe Havens for Utah Dogs Expanded Statewide

Friends of Animals Utah, an animal rescue organization in Park City, Utah that provides Safe Haven pet care for the animal survivors of domestic violence in collaboration with the Peace House women’s center, has announced its program will be available statewide. Executive Director Claudia McMullin reports that the Purple Paw Project foster care service will be available to any domestic violence shelter in Utah that does not have an existing relationship with an animal shelter. “We want to provide a place for people to feel safe in leaving their pets while they escape a domestic violence situation. We also want to stop animal abuse. And we want to try to stop people giving up their pets to animal shelters. We want to keep families and their pets together,” she says.

Therapy Dog Calms Victims and Witnesses of Crimes

Malvern

Santa Barbara, Calif. District Attorney Joyce Dudley has become the latest prosecutor to employ a therapy dog to provide emotional support to victims and witnesses in stressful criminal justice proceedings. “Malvern,” a two-year-old Labrador/golden retriever mix, is now a “canine consoler” comforting people dealing with the emotional, psychological or physical effects of crime. In his first week on the job, “Malvern” has already helped one woman calm down enough to be able to testify in court. The pooch was provided by Canine Companions for Independence. If the program is successful, similar therapy dogs may be added to the department’s Lompoc and Santa Maria offices as well. “Malvern has a calming effect on not only the victims but also on our staff of secretaries and attorneys alike,” said Dudley.

The Link in the News

Two Link Cases Surface in Toledo, Ohio

Aaron Nova was charged with cruelty in the incident involving “Marbles.”

A Lucas County, Ohio dog warden with a history of domestic violence was charged with one count of animal cruelty after a kennel security camera captured him allegedly using a chokehold to pick up a 46-pound Labrador/hound mix named “Marbles,” slamming it against a kennel door, and throwing it into a kennel. Aaron A. Nova, 26, was charged with a 2nd-degree misdemeanor in the July 22 incident. The Toledo Blade reported that Nova, who was employed at the kennel for six years, has a prior history of violent behavior. He had been sentenced on May 3 to a six-month suspended jail sentence and two years’ probation after pleading no contest to domestic violence and assault charges after striking the mother of his daughter with his fist and trying to pull her out of a motor vehicle. “Marbles” reportedly showed no ill effects from the incident.

In a second case in Toledo, Jason Burrell was sentenced on Aug. 28 for crushing a puppy to death and leaving the body in his yard. Burrell had been convicted in 2000 of a domestic violence charge. Ken Shapiro and Bee Friedlander of the Animals & Society Institute were interviewed by the Toledo Blade regarding these cases, describing both animal abuse and domestic violence as falling within “general deviance” behaviors. “It is important that all professionals who investigate violence in the home be trained on the cycle of violence so that they are better aware of the connection and better able to respond,” said Friedlander.

Animal Cruelty Investigation Uncovers Suspected Child Abuse

Mabel Jo Larson and Aaron Michael Parker

Liberty County, Tex. authorities investigating a report of suspected animal cruelty discovered a baby with roaches crawling over her head and out of her diaper in a filthy home filled with festering trash, feces and the stench of decay. Authorities also found a dead horse and dozens of severely malnourished dogs on the property where the one-year-old child, whose existence did not appear to be known to the outside world, lived.

The child’s mother, Mabel Jo Larsen, who allegedly said she had sometimes put the toddler in a dog cage, was arrested and charged with animal cruelty. Child endangerment charges were pending. The purported father of the baby, Aaron Michael Parker, was also arrested and charged with probation violations, the Houston Chronicle reported.

The parents were on probation for child abuse after pleading guilty to child injury last year after Child Protective Services officials removed five other youngsters in 2009 when Parker’s then-10-year-old daughter was found by a neighbor, malnourished and bruised, as she tried to run away.

Sheriff’s deputies and Houston SPCA investigators removed two horses, 16 dogs and one cat from the property. The infant was placed in foster care.

Felony Cruelty Initiative Proposed for North Dakota

Initiative supporters watch as North Dakota Secretary of State workers process initiative petitions.

In the absence of legislative support for a law to increase animal cruelty penalties to felony-level charges, activists in North Dakota have amassed thousands of signatures to put a citizens' initiative on the November ballot. The move, if enacted, would also require offenders convicted of felony aggravated animal cruelty to undergo psychiatric evaluation and not own a dog, cat or horse for up to five years. The measure is opposed by farm groups. North and South Dakota are the only two states lacking felony cruelty provisions.

Two Named to National Link Coalition Steering Committee

Jane Raymond to Represent Elder Abuse Community

Jane Raymond

Jane A. Raymond, who recently retired after serving 26 years as the Advocacy and Protection Systems Developer for the State of Wisconsin's Division of Disability and Elder Services' Bureau of Aging and Long-Term Care Resources, has been named to the National Link Coalition's Steering Committee.

Raymond was nominated to the committee by the National Clearinghouse on Abuse in Later Life. Her appointment gives the National Link Coalition a welcomed liaison with the elder abuse and Adult Protective Services community. She worked at the state level to further develop domestic abuse, elder abuse, adult protective services, and aging network responses and landmark legislation for adults at risk. Raymond and Randy Lockwood co-authored the seminal 2003 manual, Creating Safer Communities for Older Adults and Companion Animals, currently the only Link guidebook for adult protection officials. Raymond has been recognized by the National Adult Protective Services Association and the Wisconsin Coalition Against Domestic Violence for her significant contributions to social justice.

Amanda Widup to Represent Family Court Judges

Amanda Widup, MSW

The National Link Coalition is pleased to welcome Amanda Widup, MSW to our Steering Committee. Amanda is a policy analyst with the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, in Reno, Nev.

She was a graduate assistant in the Institute for Family Violence Studies in the Florida State University School of Social Work. She served as a victim witness assistant and social worker for the State of Wyoming. She has been a MDT Coordinator and Family Preservation Specialist working with youths in the juvenile justice system, and was the volunteer coordinator for CASA of Laramie County, Wyo. In her domestic violence social work she often saw how pet abuse was a precursor to child and spouse abuse, and how victims would not leave for fear their animals would be killed in retaliation.

Ohio Domestic Violence Network Features Animal Resources

In what may be the most comprehensive such resource in the U.S., the Ohio Domestic Violence Network has established a section on its website called “Domestic Violence and Animal Issues.” The section includes sample procedures for shelter residents with pets; a survey of Ohio’s domestic violence community’s responses to pets; statistics; and the Childhood Trust Survey of Animal-Related Experiences.

The extensive compilation of resources also includes a collection of forms covering animal intakes, agreements between the resident and the shelter, consent and release for boarding, foster owner agreement, foster caregiver agreement, safety planning for pets, shelter supply list, contract extension, extended care contract, program evaluation form, and a memorandum of understanding between the animal and domestic violence shelters.

The Link in the Literature

Conceptualizing Animal Abuse as Antisocial Behavior

Amid ongoing criticisms that the links between animal abuse and antisocial behaviors have not been firmly established and that the empirical research often lacks sound methodology, Australian psychologist Eleonora Gullone argues that current conceptualizations of antisocial and aggressive human behavior logically incorporate animal abuse. “It is not at all surprising that the two co-occur: indeed, it would be surprising if they did not,” she writes. By considering animal abuse as an aggressive behavior rather than as a behavior that is somehow different, a more practical framework emerges for the study of animal cruelty. The implications of such a framework are that law enforcement, health and other professionals should not minimize the presence of animal abuse in their enforcement, prevention and treatment decisions.

Ohio Groups Link Up for Link Awareness

For the fifth consecutive year, the Medina County, Ohio Domestic & Sexual Abuse Coalition and the Medina County SPCA are joining forces to kick off Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The 2012 “Walk With Your Best Friend Against Abuse” is a one-mile stroll for people and their furry friends to raise awareness of The Link on Saturday, Oct. 6.

The fun walk is a symbolic show of support that also includes a dog costume contest, activities for children and refreshments, said Becky Hewit, chair of the Coalition and community services manager of the Battered Women’s Shelter. October 6 is also National SAF-T™ Day, created to celebrate Sheltering Animals and Families Together in domestic violence safe houses and the comfort and healing that pets can bring to domestic violence survivors. 72 shelters, including two in Ohio, have on-site animal housing capabilities.

ABOUT THE NATIONAL LINK COALITION

The National Link Coalition is an informal, multi-disciplinary collaborative network of individuals and organizations in human services and animal welfare who address the intersections between animal abuse, domestic violence, child maltreatment and elder abuse through research, public policy, programming and community awareness. We believe that human and animal well-being are inextricably intertwined and that the prevention of family and community violence can best be achieved through partnerships representing multi-species perspectives.

OUR VISION: The Link between violence against humans and violence against animals is widely known and understood. We believe that through the recognition and integration of this understanding into policies and practices nationwide, humans and animals will be measurably safer.
